An Eel Fisher. The houseboats of the eelfishers are a quaint feature of the Norfolk Broads. Many visitors from all parts of the country rent one of these boats, whose tackle for both fishing and sailing is extensive. The dwelling quarters for the fisherman's crew of these eelfishers are very small and often as many as 4 or 5 inches of water can be seen through the floor.

Dear E Alderman Good Thing morning I was driving some home when it was very wet & rained out it was very cold but could not help admiring the beauty of the country as it looked so lovely Hope you are well
Love Cecil

An Eel Fisher. The houseboats of the eel fishers are a quaint feature of these parts. They are usually formed from old ships' boats, with sides raised and roofed in, the whole tarred or whitewashed, thus forming a shelter and dwelling house for the eel fisher and his "crew." These fishers are very expert, and on a dark night as many as 40 stones of eels have been taken in one net.

Dear Mama, How are you getting on dear, We are getting on alright & hope that you are keeping well. We have had a nice walk tonight to Hillmorton - back on the Barby Road. If you can't manage alone dear you must let me know because I do not want you to work & make yourself ill. Nance is getting on alright' up to now I hope that they keep him on Nance sends his love & you Dad with best love to you

Dad know Nellie, I can't get me "OUIETTE" yet but will do Mr Brook for you.
